Eaker Predicts Invasion Across English Channel

Record Bombings Are Prelude to Big Land Attack

Predicts Heavy Cost in Lives

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 11 (AP)—Predicting an Allied invasion of Germany "across the English channel and the North Sea," Lt. Gen. Tra C. Eaker disclosed today that the United States Eighth Air Force sent fleets of more than 400 bombers in its largest attacking force on record—against the Nazis both Friday and Saturday.

On Friday Britain-based American Flying Fortresses and Liberators bombed the Stuka factory in Bremen, Germany, and the submarine ship-building yards at Vegesack nearby.

Americans Raid Danzig

Saturday the American bombers, in their deepest penetration of Nazi territory, flew a round trip of 1,800 miles to blast the ports of the former free city of Danzig, the former Polish city of Gdynia and other targets in Eastern Germany.

Gen. Eaker, commander of the Eighth Air Force, in a Transatlantic broadcast from a CBS program, said there were 4,000 men in each mission. United States heavy bombers have crews of ten each.

Friday was the first anniversary of the Americans' 100-bomber raid on Lille, France.

Drop 1,800 Tons of Bombs

The size of the force would indicate that the weight of bombs dropped each day possibly amounted to as much as 1,800 American tons. Fortresses are "stated to have a bomb-carrying capacity of four tons each, but on longer raids it generally is believed the load carried is somewhat less because of the need for additional gasoline.

Gen. Eaker said that in September the weight of bombs dropped by United States heavy bomber forces was fifty per cent higher than in any previous month and that 262 Nazi fighter planes were destroyed. Already in October more than 4,400 tons have been dropped and 450 German fighters have been shot out of the sky.

Asserting that in the contest with the Germans "we are just past the turning point," Gen. Eaker, in referring to the widely discussed possibility of an Allied invasion across the North Sea, said:

Holds Invasion Certain

"Before Hitler can be crushed like Mussolini, American land and sea forces must join the British in pushing across the English channel and North Sea.

"The big push into Germany, when it comes, will cost lives just as the landings at Salerno did. It is the task of the Eighth Air Force and the RAF to destroy factories and transport and weapons of the Germans so our invasion casualties will be cut down.

"That is our stern assignment this winter. We shall not shrink from it."

Last Friday we sent over 4,000 Eighth Air Force fighters against German industrial targets, and again yesterday more than 4,000 fought their way through German defenses to destroy vital Nazi aircraft factories.

"The fight now is at white heat. We have just passed the turning point. We will win in the end and it will be a legal victory. There will be no rain (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Strike of Truck Drivers Ties Up Motor Transportation in Mid-South

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 10 (AP)—More than 3,200 truck drivers went on strike amid indications that others would join them tomorrow, motor freight transportation in the mid-south tonight was paralyzed.

Millions of pounds of freight, including war materials, were piled up in warehouses here and at other major terminals.

The army announced, however, that Robert Borden, international representative of the American Federation of Labor at Birmingham, Ala., had pledged "every effort" would be made to continue the movement of materials intended for "war purposes" and to get the drivers back on the job.

Fortresses Destroy 102 German Planes in Raids on Nazi Centers

30 American Bombers and Two Fighters Lost in Daylight Battles with German Aerials

By GLADWIN HILL

LONDON, Oct. 10 (AP)—United States Flying Fortresses ripped Nazi installations at Munster and Coesfeld and the Netherlands airfield at Encheade today and, with their Thunderbolt escort, destroyed 102 German fighters, it was announced tonight.

Thirty bombers and two fighters were reported missing from these forays, making up the third successive American daylight raid on Germany, less than twenty-four hours after a record penetration of Poland and East Prussia, in which the Fortresses severely hit enemy aircraft production and shipping.

Rep. Robertson Joins Backers Of a Sales Tax

Virginian Takes Determined Stand

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP)—Rep. Robertson (D-Va.), member of the tax-framing House Ways and Means committee, came out flatly today for a federal retail sales tax, thus assuring a Congressional show-down on this levy as a possible substitute for the administration's badly trampled $10,500,000,000 new revenue program.

The Virginian is the first ways and means member to take a firm public stand for a sales tax.

Plan Meets with Favor

His formal statement came in the midst of growing Capitol Hill talk of using this revenue medium to supplant the administration program of increased rates on incomes and on so-called luxury items.

At this time, however, it still is doubtful that a ten per cent sales levy, to raise $6,000,000,000, can muster enough votes to pass. It is studied with political explosives, and is vigorously opposed by the administration.

"Fiscal policies should be aimed to stimulate and not retard production," Robertson said, "to prevent, together with price, wage and rationing control, an inflationary price movement; avoid making the transition to post-war economy more difficult, and last but not least promote as far as possible national unity."

Scores Treasury Program.

"In my opinion, the tax program presented to our committee by the Treasury department violates every one of these fundamental fiscal policies."

The administration program was as good as scrapped the day it was presented by Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau. Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (D-N.C.) described it then as "ambitious" and in some respects "indefensible." Robertson listed "advantages" of (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2) with a swarm of German fighters, both Focke Wulfs and Messerschmitts.

The Fortresses were credited with destruction of eighty-one Nazi fighters; the Thunderbolts twenty-one.

British Bomb Berlin

The new target was hammered only a few hours after RAF Mosquito bombers loosed bombs on Berlin last night for the fourteenth time in less than a month.

Today's foray, reinforcing the aerial iron ring about Hitler's fortress which was forged yesterday by Liberators and Flying Fortresses in their epochal 1,800-mile round trip into the Russians' raiding grounds, came as the United States bomber command announced remarkable successes in Saturday's four-ply attack on Poland, East Prussia and Pomerania.

Germans Blasted In Major Aerial Drive in Balkans

Aegean Area Also Bombed by "Forts"

By EDWARD KENNEDY

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, ALGIERS, Oct. 10 (AP)—Northwest African air forces uncoiled a blistering aerial offensive against the Germans in the Balkans and Aegean area yesterday, with Flying Fortresses and Liberators pounding five big enemy airfields in Greece and Crete, and United States Lightnings wiping out sixteen Nazi bombers near Rhodes.

American Flying Fortresses staged a mass raid on the important Eleusis airfield near Athens, showering the entire area with fragmentation and incendiary bombs, leaving many ground planes burning, blowing up an explosives dump, and knocking down five out of fifteen enemy fighters.

Airfield Wrecked

Sedes airfield—eight and a half miles southeast of Salonika, Greece's second largest city—was struck by other Fortresses and official reports today declared "a tremendous explosion and fire were seen." Unopposed, the bombers scored hits on hangars, runways and a fuel dump, and fired a number of parked planes at this strategic gateway to the Vardar valley, a possible invasion road into the Balkans.

United States Mitchells, using bases in Italy, teamed up with Fortresses for a two-fisted punch at Larissa airfield, 130 miles northwest of Athens and ninety-five miles southwest of Salonika, the most important German air base in Eastern Greece.

The big bombers went in first, covering the entire field, hitting ground planes, runways, revetments and oil dumps. The Mitchells, attacking in the afternoon, rained down thousands of fragmentation bombs, leaving ten to fifteen enemy planes afire.

In a fourth raid by Fortresses, bombs were concentrated on Argos airfield in the Peloponnese. Parked planes and oil stores were turned into flames.

Attack Nazi Airdrome

United States Liberators attacked Kastell airdrome in Crete, leaving many craters in runways and lifting landing strips.

Three additional raids on German airbases in Rhodes and Crete were announced today. In these, American Liberators bombed the Maritza and Calato airfields in Rhodes and Heraklion field in Crete, pouring bombs on planes and buildings. They met no enemy fighters.

Not a single Fortress or Liberator was lost in the day's far-reaching attacks—the heaviest blows delivered against the German air force in the Balkans and Eastern Mediterranean area in many months.

Bag 15 Nazi Planes

American Lightnings, flying from Middle East bases, bagged one of the largest single hauls of Stuka dive-bombers ever claimed in a single attack by the northwest African air force, meeting fifteen of the enemy planes over the strait of Scarpanto between Rhodes and Crete.

U. S. Ambassador Winant's Son Is Missing in Action

Young Lieutenant Lost with Plane

A U. S. BOMBER STATION IN ENGLAND, Oct. 10 (AP)—Lt. John G. Winant, Jr., son of the American ambassador to Britain, was reported missing from a raid over Germany today.

It was the thirteenth combat mission for the 21-year-old Flying Fortress pilot.

Fellow fliers reported that his plane, "Tech Supply," was shot down by a German fighter.

Downed by Rocket Guns

It went down during an attack by German fighters equipped with rocket guns attached under their wings, which yesterday bombarded Flying Fortress formations with steel fragments as long as fourteen inches and weighing ten pounds.

The "Tech Supply" was reported to have been hit at 25,000 feet some fifteen minutes after bombing the target.

Five parachutes were seen drifting from the falling fortress, and an observer said it was believed that a sixth crewman jumped free and that his parachute possibly opened later. Nine crewmen customarily are carried aboard a Fortress.

Recently Promoted

Young Winant was promoted to first lieutenant last month after he had completed his sixth raid.

He was reported missing in August on the return trip from Africa after the first American shuttle raid on Germany. It later developed, however, that his plane had been forced to turn back to Africa during the homeward trip because of engine trouble, and he was able to fly back to his home base a few days later.

He was termed a "good Joe" by his fellow pilots for taking his ship through 300 miles of the hottest enemy territory with his rudder control shot away during that raid on Germany in which his crew was credited with shooting down two German fighters.

Young Winant, usually as quiet as his father, said of that flight: "I was too scared to know whether it was tough flying without the rudder control."

He admitted a piece of shell had flattened itself against the armor plate of his seat.

The ambassador's son was a student at Princeton university before joining the air force.

Balkan Invasion This Year Unlikely

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 10 (AP)—Just returned from an officially-sponsored trip through Hungary, the correspondent of the Stockholm Tidningen said today that Hungarians had told him "the danger of invasion of the Balkans this year is over."

"It is too late to start before next spring, when a new crisis will hang over the Balkans," he quoted Hungarians as saying. "But by then the situation may have changed so much Hungarians won't have to face it."

He and other correspondents said the Hungarian people wanted to get out of the war, and were resigned, feeling that "for us there is only one question—who will come first, Germany, Russia, or the Anglo-Americans."

$300,000,000 in Federal Grants To Schools Backed by New Deal

By FRANCIS J. KELLY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP)—Administration leaders in the Senate, especially those from the south, threw their weight enthusiastically today behind a long-pending bill authorizing $300,000,000 a year in federal grants to public schools.

With one exception, every southern state would get more than $6,000,000 a year from the measure which is to be called up Tuesday. Florida would receive only $4,789,172, but Texas would get $18,135,254, Alabama $10,403,238, Georgia $10,465,580; North Carolina $12,671,022 and other cotton belt states somewhat smaller amounts.

Grants to New England

At the other end of the line, smallest amounts would go to small New England and Eastern states and lightly populated Western states.

Sponsors of the measure believe

61 Jap Planes Are Destroyed On Wake Island

Enemy Positions Heavily Smashed

PEARL HARBOR, Oct. 10 (AP)—

Japanese positions on Wake Island were smashed heavily and more than sixty enemy planes were destroyed in a two-day bombing and shelling. Wake's three tiny atolls Tuesday and Wednesday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported today.

The commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet said the destruction on the enemy-held position in the Central Pacific was wrought jointly by an aircraft-carrier task force and land-based navy Liberator bombers.

Resistance From Air

The enemy apparently offered material resistance to the initial attack at dawn Tuesday, which was made by a task force under the command of Rear Adm. Alfred E. Montgomery, Nimitz's communicate said.

Besides being blasted in the greatest bombing strike United States forces ever have delivered against the Japanese, Wake's garrison also was bombarded Tuesday morning by warships of Admiral Montgomery's force.

Casualties among enemy personnel were not mentioned in Nimitz's communicate. But Comdr. John T. Hayward of Great Neck, L. I., N. Y., who got a close-up look in a strafing run at 300 feet altitude with a big four-engine Liberator, told correspondents in an interview:

Dead Japs Seen

"We saw a considerable number of dead Japs scattered around the landscape."

Detailing the damage caused, the communicate said:

"In extended attacks, our planes dropped 320 tons of bombs. An intensive bombardment by ships combined to inflict considerable damage."

they have side-stepped previous objections to similar legislation by declaring at the very start of the bill that the federal government shall not exercise any supervision over the administration or study courses of a state's schools.

Two-thirds of the authorization would be emergency in character and would be used principally to raise teachers' salaries (matching increased living costs and combating the loss of teacher personnel to war plants) and to employ additional instructors to relieve overcrowded classes.

The remaining $100,000,000 would finance a permanent federal school aid policy designed to iron out regional inequalities in educational opportunities.

The $200,000,000 emergency fund would be allocated on the ratio that the average daily attendance of pupils in each state bears to the total (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

RUSSIANS MAKE GREAT GAINS IN "BATTLE OF BRIDGEHEADS"

By JAMES M. LONG

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 11 (AP)—The Red army has captured an important height and village on the western side of the shattered Dnieper river line, Moscow announced early today, smashing ahead over the bodies of 2,000 Germans to win the second round of the "Battle of the Bridgeheads."

The Russians apparently were nearing Kiev, Ukraine capital, in a pincers move. The communicate said co-ordinated guerrilla detachments had seized several villages "in the Kiev region" and killed 400 counter-attacking Germans seeking to retake them.

Take 200 Villages

To the north the Russians plunged on toward the Polish and Latvian borders, sweeping through nearly 200 villages and killing 2,000 more Germans in the White Russian and Nevel theaters. One Russian column captured a town only eleven miles east of Gomel, strategic rail hub in lower White Russia.

The fateful battle on the Dnieper, which threatens to collapse the entire German defenses in the Ukraine, had developed into a grueling infantry, tank and plane struggle, dispatches said.

An indication of its intensity was given in the communicate which said the Russians had knocked out sixty-four tanks and fifty-eight planes during Saturday's fighting.

A Pravda correspondent, however, said flatly that Germany's "plans to use the Dnieper as a defense line have failed."

Red Power Growing

The Russians were reported steadily increasing their tanks and artillery strength on the west bank north of Kiev, and below Pereyaslav and Kremenchuk to the south despite desperate German efforts to plug these three holes in their natural defense wall.

The Berlin radio, which was ahead of Moscow in telling of these Russian crossings, announced fresh Soviet attempts to force the Dnieper at other points. The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, declared these were "broken up."

Pravda said captured documents and testimony from prisoners disclosed beyond doubt that Adolf Hitler's headquarters had decided the Dnieper was the limit of retreat, beyond which the Germans must contest every inch of ground.

Advance in North

On the Central and North Central fronts the Russians rolled ahead under leaden skies and through drenched peat bogs and forests in their multiple efforts to unhinge that corridor connecting the middle Dnieper defenses with Axis lines near Leningrad.

Debrush, only eleven miles east of Gomel in lower White Russia, was overwhelmed by Russian columns converging on that railway hub, the communicate said. Another Soviet unit previously had been reported fighting toward Gomel from Zhabrovka, eleven miles from the city on the southeast.

The greatest Russian stride was reported toward Vitebsk, in upper White Russia, where the Red army swept through more than 140 villages in gains of four to seven miles.

With one Russian column hammering beyond Liozno, twenty-five miles from Vitebsk one the south-

Four More Towns Seized in Drive

By NOLAND NORGAARD

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, ALGIERS, Oct. 10 (AP)—Pushing ahead against seven German divisions in Italy, the Allied Fifth Army has increased the pressure along a 44-mile water line on the Volturno and Calore rivers, and the Eighth army has cut one to four miles deeper on the Adriatic flank, Allied headquarters announced today.

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's fighters now are all along the southern banks of the Volturno and Calore for a distance of forty-four air-line miles from the sea to Ponte, near Benevento, and astride both banks of the Calore beyond Ponte.

From there, the Allied line runs northeastward to San Marco, occupied by the British yesterday. San Marco is six miles west of Motta and is directly east of Campobasso.

Eighth Army Advances

The Eighth army beat back the enemy along the thirty-mile line from San Marco to the Adriatic with gains of one to four miles, taking the towns of Guglionesi, Larino, Colletorto, and Gambatesa, and adding a strip two miles wide to the area held in the Termoli region on the coast.

The advance in the central sector was available here to the southern units of the Indian army and Indian state forces are now operating in Italy, it was disclosed officially.

While no additional information was available here on the Fifth army patrols that crossed the Volturno river to probe enemy strength, it was said that they were "very active."

Italians Forced To Work

A headquarters officer said the Germans have been using forced Italian labor extensively in building hasty defenses along the Volturno, the largest river in Italy south of the Tiber.

They are believed to be preparing another line between that river and Rome for another delaying action after they have been pushed back from this position.

It is therefore held likely to be several weeks before the Allies smash through the hundred air-line miles between the Fifth army and the Eternal City.

Rains are continuing to make progress slow and difficult both for troops and supply vehicles.

Sweep Across Adriatic

The northwest African air force supported ground troops yesterday, hurling medium bombers against gun positions and transports, and lunged out again at Nazi airfields in Greece, and swept across the Adriatic over which the Allies already appear to have won mastery of the air.

This was evidenced by the fact that American Lightnings shot down sixteen Stukas over the strait of Scarpanto between Rhodes and Scarpanto.

In twenty-four hours of operations, twenty-two enemy planes were downed, while one Allied aircraft was missing.

Striking behind the battlefield in Italy, United States Warhawks and RAF and Australian Kittyhawks destroyed forty-three motor trucks and other vehicles Saturday. Most were found on side roads around Monterotondo twelve miles west of Rome.

Lethargy and Inefficiency Charged To British, Sen. Tydings Declares

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10 (AP)—The five United States senators who returned recently from a world tour of battle areas believe that the British effort in India is "one of great lethargy and inefficiency," Sen. Millard E. Tydings (D-Md.) declared today.

In his regular weekly radio address Tydings asserted that "the senators were disappointed, and said so frankly, with the British effort in India x x x. They (the senators) are hopeful that the new British commander, Lord Mountbatten, a decided improvement will take place."

"For two days this week we have heard reports of the five senators," he said. "Their report was very encouraging as to the quality and efficiency of our fighting force on land, sea and in the air."

Discussing the draft changes approved by the Senate last week, Tydings said that if all the revisions are carried out "it is not unlikely that hundreds of thousands of single men, now exempted and deferred, will be made available for military service."

"This will accordingly vastly decrease the number of fathers who will be needed."

The amendments, which must be passed upon by the House of Representatives, who require written proof of the indispensability of single and childless married men and the setting up of boards to re-view service physical standards for induction to see if some of those now in 4-F could be accepted for limited service.

Youth Confesses Triple Murder

Morell Describes Slayings on Farm

MERCER, Pa., Oct. 10 (AP)—State Police Sergeant Frank Milligan said tonight that William Albert Morell, husky, black-haired farm hand, had made a "full and complete" confession to the slayings of an elderly man and woman and his employer's wife at a dairy farm near here last Thursday.

Sgt. Milligan said the 20-year-old youth told District Attorney Edwin C. Moon and himself how he had bound and gagged Mrs. Helen Wilson, 46, and looped a rope about her neck after an argument in a barn on the Wilson dairy farm.

Milligan said that Morell, speaking in a calm, level voice and with no outward show of emotion, told of going into the farmhouse and shooting the dairy owner's mother, Mrs. Catherine Wilson, 76, and farmhand, Robert McKay, 70, with a shotgun, and of his escape in McKay's car with Janice Graham, 30. The flight ended with capture of the youth and girl at a farmhouse near Claridon, O., Friday night.

The young farm hand insisted Miss Graham, whom he said he had "intended to marry," knew nothing of the slayings. Milligan stated, this corroborating her statement that Morell had trusted her up and forced her to accompany him to Ohio.

Morell will be arraigned before justice of the peace Thomas McClain Monday on a charge of first degree murder, Moon said. The district attorney added: "I do not believe any charge will be filed against the girl."

plant at Marienburg, East Prussia, where half of Germany's prime fighter planes are estimated to be assembled, was virtually destroyed.

The airplane parts plant at Anklam, Pomerania, was set afire and continued to blaze furiously several hours later.

German Liner Set Afire

At the Polish corridor port of Gdynia, the 550-foot, 13,387-ton German liner Stuttgart and three other ships were set afire.

Submarine and shipbuilding yards, docks, workshops, oil storage tanks and railroad yards both at Gdynia and at the former free city of Danzig across the bay were damaged.

At least ninety-one of the 100 to 200 German fighters sent up in desperate attempts to halt the American Aradama's bold journey across all of Germany were shot down, and twenty-five others probably were destroyed.

Twenty-nine bombers failed to return, but the crews of three were safe in Sweden.

Yesterday's heavy toll brought the week's score to at least 437 Nazi planes destroyed in the European and Mediterranean theaters, against an Allied loss of 209.

Allies Loss 74 Bombers

American bomber-gunners and fighters shot down 308 enemy fighters and lost seventy-four bombers and three fighters. The RAF shot down seventy-two planes in North Africa, forty-nine over German-occupied Europe, two in the middle east and six over Britain, and lost 132 planes, of which 107 went down over Europe.

Saturday's attack completely confounded Germany's defenses. The first formations reaching Marienburg fought off 100 to 200 German fighters armed with rocket guns slung under their wings, but other formations sweeping in later on Danzig and Gdynia saw only a half dozen fighters.

Berlin's Version

Berlin's version of the bitter aerial combats, which it said were waged for several hours, had sixty-two bombers shot down as against twelve of their own planes.

"Fresh Messerschmitt and Focke-Wulf fighters were thrown into the battle time and time again," said the Berlin account. "When the U. S. A. bombers approached the coastal area (of the Baltic) German flak divisions joined the battle with heavy and heaviest calibre."

"A captured American gunner spoke of the terrible and devastating effect of German fighter ammunition. One German Messerschmitt squadron within nine minutes shot down one 'element' consisting of four enemy aircraft."

"Among the places attacked were Anklam and Gottenhagen (formerly Gdynia) where buildings were damaged and the civilian population suffered losses."

Germany, France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania now are blanketed by the zones of operation of United Nations planes based in Britain, the Mediterranean area and Russia.

Gdynia and Danzig are only 100 miles west of Koenigsburg, east Prussia, which has been bombed a number of times by the Russian air force.

British-based bombers have hit Northern Italy and Czechoslovakia, deep into the territory covered also by Mediterranean-based bombers which have struck into Rumania and near Vienna.

Only twenty days ago the British and Mediterranean drives were dramatically linked by raids on Southern Germany's "Nazi capital," Munich, from both the north and south within twenty-four hours.

a ten per cent sales tax as follows:

"1. It would produce an additional $8,000,000,000 of much needed revenue.

"2. Permit present income tax exemptions to be raised instead of lowered, thus simplifying the entire tax structure.

"3. It would afford a convenient and fair method for all to contribute to war financing while being no substitute for the ability to pay program embodied in the income tax laws.

Would Restrict Consumption

"4. Since a sales tax is regressive, by which we mean it tends to restrict consumption, it is a device that should be employed when there is an inflationary money gap of thirty or more billion dollars between purchasing power and available goods at present prices.

"5. Since a sales tax is a tax on spending it affords to the tax-payer some economy option not afforded by an income tax.

"6. A sales tax has the virtue of simplicity, plus full current collection.

"7. We have mobilized one-half of our productive capacity for war which leaves one-half for consumer production. The treasury income tax proposals will reach primarily money that would go into savings and ultimately into enlarged production, while a sales tax will reach the money to be actually spent on the purchase of goods. The treasury tax proposals would dry up gifts to charity. A sales tax would not.

"8. The very quality that makes a general sales tax politically unpopular is its highest attribute in the period of grave war emergency—it reaches everyone and can be evaded by no one.

"9. Since the Ways and Means committee will not accept the treasury plan the alternative to a sales tax is a further increase in the cost of living."

Vinson Opposed

Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson told the committee last week a ten per cent sales levy would cause an eight per cent rise in the cost of living, opening the way for inflation through demands of labor for wage increases and pressure by farmers for increased prices for their commodities.

The opposite side of the argument was taken in a statement from the National Lawyers Guild, addressed to Doughton, which called on the American people "to rally behind the treasury's program modified so as to eliminate consumer taxes on items used by the low-income groups."

The Guild's principal point was that the treasury program "rejects the inequitable sales tax which would fall heaviest on those with little incomes" and at the same time would "effectively reach the higher incomes."

Big Rekata Base Is Reported in Hands of Allies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP)—The Japanese may again have withdrawn from an important position without putting up bitter-end resistance.

The Tokyo radio broadcast reported by Berlin said Japanese navy aircraft had bombed Rekata on Santa Isabel Island in the Solomons, thus indicating that Allied forces had taken over the big sea plane base which had been in the hands of the enemy since his initial southward surge through the Western Pacific.

Although today's announcement received no immediate direct official confirmation from Washington or other Allied sources, there were indications of its likelihood.

A month ago, Secretary of War Stimson announced that "preliminary reconnaissance seems to indicate the Japanese have fled hastily from the sea plane base at Rekata Bay, leaving behind considerable quantities of food and ammunition."

This, taken in conjunction with the enemy's announcement, would suggest that Allied forces moved in to Rekata sometime within the last month.

One important reason for withdrawing from Rekata would be the fact that the Japanese were outflanked in that position when Allied forces completed conquest of the Central Solomons several weeks ago.

Because of the new Allied positions in the Solomons, Rekata bay now would be of less value for Allied operations than during the time when some of the central area was in enemy hands.

However, driving the enemy out of Santa Isabel would mean that he has lost his last reconnaissance base of any importance south of his present foothold in the Shortland Islands area and at Bougainville, at the extreme northern end of the general Solomon group.

checks, and we won't have to play the game over."

Naples Explosion Believed To Have Been Spite Action

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP)—The explosion that blew the Naples postoffice apart with heavy civilian casualties days after the Germans were driven out of the town put the Allies on notice of a Nazi device of revenge with which they may have to reckon all the way to Berlin.

Military opinion here is inclined to attribute the planting of huge time-action mines largely to plain spite directed against civil populations, although it is conceded that the Germans might hope to blast an Allied headquarters or inflict other military damage by a sort of scatter-gun shot in their rear.

Army sources see little in the way of counter-measures that can be taken immediately.

On the basis of press reports, officials are inclined to believe that the Germans planted the mine in the Naples postoffice with the primary thought of blasting civilians. It was recalled, however, that several days before the postoffice mine detonated, Allied troops discovered another huge mine in a large hotel which the enemy might have assumed would become headquarters for Lt. General Mark Clark's forces.

German Reasoning

It was conceded, too, that because the Germans themselves often use public buildings as headquarters they might have reasoned that the Allies would take over the postoffice. But they also must have reckoned that because the postoffice was the only public building left standing intact in Naples the population would utilize it.

Detection devices and general caution can largely nullify the effectiveness of common land mines actuated by pressure of foot or wheel, or booby traps set off by casual acts of the intended victim.

But if the enemy merely wants to blow up a building and whoever may be there at a given time, clock-work devices and a little skill in replacing wall or floor over his pounds or tons of explosives do the job without visible wires or other warning.

Detection Difficult

Unless the entering army can take time to go over every foot of city pavement and every inch of wall with a mine-detecting device the presence of such a mine must be disclosed only when it explodes.

The Germans, it is noted, apparently have developed to a high point of perfection the time mechanism for exploding bombs. Nazi saboteurs captured after they landed on the east coast from a U-boat were carrying a precision-built watch movement with attachment for a detonator. The movement could be set for any time from one to fourteen days.

The Nazis had been out of Naples about a week when the postoffice mine let go.

Germans Approve Russian Plan To Shorten Line

By ELTON C. FAY

Associated Press War Analyst

The Russians are getting ready to co-operate with the Germans in shortening the Nazis' Eastern front.

This operation, if successful, should have the approval of the German militarists who now find it more and more necessary to explain to themselves and the German people the advantages of strategic withdrawal, breaking contact with the enemy and falling back to previously prepared positions.

The setting apparently chosen for the line shortening, at least by Marshal Stalin of Russia, is the Southern end of the German front. There the line now runs south-eastward along the upper part of the great bend in the Dnieper river, then drops south overland to the vicinity of Melitopol and the sea of Azov. And, as an extension to the line, is the German position in Crimea, to which he was driven when the Red army swept him out of the Kuban area.

national daily attendance. The $100,000,000 would be divided under a formula of financial need, based on the number of school age children and the financial ability of each state as measures by income tax payments.

Schools Face Collapse

The Senate education committee, which recommended passage of the bill, says the extremely large turnover among teachers as a result of the war "threatens the serious crippling, if not the actual collapse, of large numbers of our schools."

As an argument for a permanent policy of federal aid, the committee says the states least able to support schools have the most children to be educated.

Yugoslavs Drive Nazis Back in Heavy Fighting

Recapture Large Part of Homeland

LONDON, Oct. 10 (AP)—Red-starred Yugoslav partisans have pushed German troops back toward the Italian port of Trieste in heavy fighting and now hold hundreds of square miles of their homeland, two communiques from the Free Yugoslav radio said today.

One communique, a recapitulation of the recent fighting against five German divisions, said the army of liberation led by "Drug Tito" (Josip Broz) had accomplished the following results:

Hold Large Area

The partisan armies now hold the whole of Sandjak, (in Bosnia) and Eastern Bosnia, by far the larger part of Montenegro parts of Hercegovina, the greater part of Dalmatia and the Dalmatian islands, Croatian coastal regions and those areas of Western Croatia from Susak northeast along the Susak-Ogulin-Karkovac railway, and in districts in Northeast Croatia east of Zagreb towards Varazdin and the Hungarian border.

(Daniel De Luce, Associated Press war correspondent, after a visit to Yugoslav areas held by the partisan forces, has confirmed Tito's claims that hundreds of miles in the Yugoslav interior are held by the patriots but that all the important coastal areas and larger towns inland are in German hands.)

The Yugoslav radio said that Ogulin itself remains in German possession but that the German garrison has been surrounded and is being supplied by the Germans from the air.

Fighting in Trieste

One band of Yugoslavs was reported in yesterday's communique to be fighting the Germans in the southern suburbs of Trieste, and today's broadcast said the Nazis were hurriedly bringing up reinforcements in an attempt to counter pressure along the vital railway line linking Trieste with Ljubljana.

Germans Blasted

panto and wiping them out.

Airmen of the Middle East command slashed last night at enemy shipping in the area of Cos in the Dodecanese, which has been invaded by the Germans, hitting two vessels.

Flying Fortresses flew 1,500 miles roundtrip on missions against Greece, and results of their raids were described as particularly good at Larissa, where their bombs potted the field.

None of the Liberators or Fortresses had escorts.

All these Greek and Cretan objectives were the scenes of heavy German attacks in the spring of 1941 when the British were driven out of Greece, and then lost Crete in a furious Nazi air-borne attack. It was at Larissa airfield that an RAF fighter force was wiped out in the Greek campaign.

Kastell airfield in Crete was one of those seized by German paratroopers in May 1941. It was the scene of a bloody battle when Australian and New Zealand troops attacked repeatedly and at times occupied part of the field, only to be finally driven into the hills by the growing German force.

strength of the United Nations against the repeatedly demoralized aggressors," final victory of the United Nations might be celebrated at this time next year."

Americans Reply

Maj. Gen. Thomas Hearn, chief of staff of Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, chief of staff who is in New Delhi, replied that the United Nations are "moving in for the kill" and that "the end is in sight, but it is not near."

Taking the oath of office, Chiang pledged to endeavor to recover China's lost territory.

The fifty-six-year-old generalissimo also promised to "comply with the teachings of Dr. Sun Yat-sen," the father of the Chinese revolution, and to "submit to the sanction of the law in the event of violation of my oath."

Firecrackers exploded throughout the capital in an enthusiastic rejoicing as Chiang, in the full dress uniform of a field marshal, took the oath in the hall of ceremonies at the national government building.

"Enemy defenses were so neutralized in the initial bombardment that heavy bombers encountered only weak, ineffective anti-aircraft fire and no air opposition in their low altitude bombing attack in the late afternoon of Oct. 5.

"Our forces destroyed thirty or more enemy planes in the air and thirty-one on the ground. Many fires were started in plane dispersal areas, shops, barracks and storage areas throughout the three islands.

"Two small vessels, one loaded with gasoline, were destroyed. "Damage by enemy action to our ships and personnel was negligible. We lost 13 planes in combat."

members of the state according to congressional, district, county, board and precincts, and to organize members by precincts. Katz said.

Political objectives of the council, Katz said, are to support "win the war" candidates, people who by their actions and policies are subordinating every interest towards winning the war.

A delegation will be sent to confer with Governor O'Connor to request help in getting clerks of the county courts and board of election supervisors to adjust operations so that it will be possible for war workers to declare their intentions before the deadline, at or near war plants, particularly in Baltimore county.

Katz declared better co-operation between CIO and A.F. of L. unions may result from a decision of the council to accept an invitation from Charles W. Mitzel, labor production representative of the War Production Board, to attend a conference in Baltimore to discuss with A.F. of L. and other union representatives the development of harmony in labor relations and to seek to eliminate possibilities of jurisdictional conflicts.

Walter MacManoman, Baltimore, business manager of Local 43, Shipyard Workers, CIO, and Edward Denhardt, business manager of Local 33, Shipyard Workers, were elected to fill vacancies in the state council.

Certain Legislation Endorsed

The council endorsed House Resolution No. 7 now before the Senate, advocating the abolition of the poll tax as a requirement for voting for federal offices. Other legislation recommended included:

HR. 3343, introduced by Congressman Sadowsky, Mich., raising the

VFW Speakers Will Explain Veteran Welfare Program

In behalf of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, VFW, William L. McKenzie will explain the ten-point program, which the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will submit to Congress in answer to President Roosevelt's proposals for a six-point veteran welfare program, in a radio address over Station WTBO tonight at 7:15 o'clock.

McKenzie's talk is scheduled as the thirty-fifth in a series of "Speak Up for Democracy" programs being broadcast under the auspices of the local VFW post on the eleventh day of each month.

allowances of wives of service men from $50 to $55 and providing $35 for the first child and $30 for the second.

The council denounced the proposed sales tax as oppressive and asserted that it would hinder the prosecution of the war by taking the food from the tables of war workers. It urged a stiffer income tax in the higher brackets and higher corporation taxes as a substitute.

Endorsed the proposed Social Security legislation and particularly emphasized the need for health provisions.

Endorsed the principles of the McCarran suffrage bill for the District of Columbia that provides for local government for Washington.

Favors Price Control

The council voted to urge all CIO affiliates to send Christmas gifts to men and women in the service here and overseas. The executive board voted to send a gift to Corp. George A. Myers, former Local 1874 president and a former president of the state council. Meyers is now stationed in Boston with the army air corps.

Katz expressed pleasure with the action of the council in selecting this city as the scene of a state convention. "The idea of a state council originated at a meeting in the Algonquin hotel in 1937," he said.

The convention will devote its major attention towards the activities of organized labor which can best promote the war effort, Katz said. Intensified production and the solution of the manpower problem will be discussed, he added. Also mentioned as an aim was co-operation with the OPA in enforcing price control.

Railroad Meeting Will Be Held in Chicago Oct. 22

According to James P. Casey, Philadelphia labor representative of the War Production Board, the meeting of all B. and O. system representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers which has been in session here since last Wednesday is responsible for the calling of a meeting in Chicago, October 22 of representatives of all American railroads to take action on the workers' disapproval of the four cents increase recently recommended by a government agency.

Casey said that the seriousness of the situation which may result in an unauthorized work stoppage as reported by representatives to the local meeting led to President D. B. Robertson's calling the national meeting, with the hope, shared by other Brotherhood leaders, that any strike movement will be held in check until the results of that gathering are known.

Harry A. Porch, this city's named representative of the Baltimore and Ohio system to attend the Chicago meeting. Both Porch and Casey said that they felt there would be no overt action before the national session, but made clear the fact that something would have to result that would be more satisfactory than the four cents increase or a strike movement might keep the ranks of railroad labor.

Bazaar Will Be Held by K. of C. In Mt. Savage

Affair Will Open Tonight and Continue Throughout the Week

MT. SAVAGE, Oct. 10—The Knights of Columbus bazaar will open tomorrow (Monday) evening in St. Patrick's hall, and will continue until Saturday night. The bazaar, the first of its kind to be held here in over ten years, will feature a new and different attraction every night. The entire three floors of the hall will be used for the entertainment. Social parties, novelty games and booths and original entertainments have been arranged.

Members of the Knights of Columbus have spent the past week decorating the hall in preparation for the affair. The decorations include lanes of electric lights leading to the hall and forming a large "V" at the entrance. The bazaar is being held at this time in honor of Columbus day as Columbus is the patron of the organization. Thursday night will be set aside as guest night for all members of Knights of Columbus councils throughout the county.

An unusual feature of the affair is that two nights have been set aside to honor members of two other local organizations. Friday night will be "Mt. Savage Volunteer Firemen's" night, and the local fire company will hold a parade through the Main street and attend the bazaar in full dress. Saturday night will be "Junior Order" night, and the guests of honor will be members of the local council of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Colin Bowers executive member of the Junior Order, has announced that the weekly social of the organization, scheduled for Saturday night, has been postponed, and that a special meeting was held urging members to attend the bazaar. Walter Meade, Grand Knight of the local K. of C. group, is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Dancing will be held nightly.

Party Is Postponed

One Bullet Kills Two Meade Soldiers

PORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Oct. 10 (P)—Two soldiers were killed by a single machine gun bullet during routine training operations, post authorities announced today.

The soldiers—Pvt. Edward M. Scott of New York city and Walter L. Sindorf of Akron, O.—were loading a machine gun onto a truck yesterday when the accident occurred.

The gun had not been cleared properly and still contained one bullet, which was discharged accidentally and pierced the stomach of one soldier and hit the other in the chest, officers said.

Both were pronounced dead on arrival at the post hospital. The post public relations officer said it was the first fatal training accident at Meade since the start of the war.

One Bullet Kills Two Meade Soldiers

PORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Oct. 10 (P)—Two soldiers were killed by a single machine gun bullet during routine training operations, post authorities announced today.

The soldiers—Pvt. Edward M. Scott of New York city and Walter L. Sindorf of Akron, O.—were loading a machine gun onto a truck yesterday when the accident occurred.

The gun had not been cleared properly and still contained one bullet, which was discharged accidentally and pierced the stomach of one soldier and hit the other in the chest, officers said.

Both were pronounced dead on arrival at the post hospital. The post public relations officer said it was the first fatal training accident at Meade since the start of the war.

Will Build Bridges

The Tucker County Court voted to share in the expense of constructing swinging bridges over Blackfork river in Hamblenton and Hendricks.

More than fifty families live across the river between these two towns and the old bridges have been pronounced unsafe more than a year ago. Construction started on the bridges this week.

Mrs. Hester Horner Becomes Bride of Dr. C. C. Barchfield

Ceremony Is Performed in St. Paul's Evangelical Church in Somerset

MEYERSDALE, Pa., Oct. 10—The marriage of Mrs. Hester Shaw Horner, daughter of the late Mrs. Lydia (Shaw) Martin, Meyersdale, and Dr. C. C. Barchfield, Somerset, has been announced by the bride's sister, Mrs. Harold A. Stewart, Latrobe, at whose home the ceremony was performed by the Rev. George L. Roth, D.D., pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical and Reformed church, Somerset, at noon, Thursday, September 30. Dr. Roth was assisted by the Rev. I. Hess Wagner, D.D., pastor of Old Trinity Lutheran church, Somerset.

A wedding breakfast was served by Mrs. Stewart for the bridal party and guests following which Dr. and Mrs. Barchfield left to spend a week honeymooning in eastern cities. They are now at home on West Union street, Somerset, having returned Friday.

Mrs. Barchfield is the youngest of the three daughters of the late Mrs. Lydia Meager Martin and her first husband, the late Columbus Shaw. She is a sister of Mrs. James B. Slicer, Meyersdale, and Mrs. Harold Stewart, Latrobe. A graduate of Goucher college, Baltimore, Mrs. Barchfield was a member of the Somerset high school faculty for several years.

Dr. Barchfield has been a practicing physician and surgeon in Somerset since 1921, having established his practice there following his graduation from the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia. He has served as chief of staff of the Somerset Community hospital.

Mrs. Weimer Dies

Mrs. Clara (Hawn) Weimer, 82, died at 3:30 yesterday morning at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Merrbach, in nearby Elk Lick township, following an extended illness.

A daughter of Lydia and William (Patton) Hawn, she was born August 2, 1861, near Salisbury, Her husband, Norman Weimer, died several years ago.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Hazel Merrbach, Elk Lick township, and Mrs. Rose Mott, Hoversville; a brother, Peter Hawn, Akron, Ohio, and two sisters, Mrs. Lula Shank and Mrs. Henry Schramm, both of Salisbury. Mrs. Weimer was a member of St. Michael's Catholic church, West Salisbury.

Fire Destroys House

Yesterday morning at 4:30 a fire destroyed the six room frame house owned by Mrs. Rose Thompson, Walker street, Garrett, including a smaller frame dwelling on the same lot occupied by Calvin Hoyman. The flames had gained considerable headway before the alarm was given, and this, together with a scarcity of water, prevented the local fire company and the Meyersdale company from extinguishing the flames.

The homes of Mrs. Anna Natalo and Silas Eash, located on the opposite side of the street, were considerably damaged. Damage is estimated at $3,500. The residence of Mrs. Thomas was partially covered by insurance.

Will Hold Meeting

The Somerset County Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its autumn meeting in the Lutheran church, Meyersdale, Wednesday, Mrs. D. E. Hoff, state federation chairman of the department of public welfare, will be the guest speaker.

Mrs. R. W. Maneval, Windber, county president, will preside at the several sessions. The morning session will begin at 10 o'clock. Luncheon will be served at 12:30.

The Woman's Club of Meyersdale will be hostess to the clubs of Somerset, Rockwood and Windber. At the afternoon session, beginning at 1:30, there will be musical and other features and an address by Mrs. Hoff.

Jonathan Meager Dies

Rites for Jonathan Meager, 87, who died Thursday at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Snelzer, 500 North street, were held yesterday afternoon.

JIG SAW BUTTER

SIXTEEN POINTS a pound for butter has turned many city dwellers to ingenious ways of churning their own. C. M. Connell, of Reading, Pa., attached a can to a jig saw. Mrs. Connell is shown placing a jar of cream in the can to be churned into butter by the vibration of the saw.

noon at 2:30, at the Snelzer home, the Rev. Nelson C. Brown, pastor of Amity Evangelical and Reformed church, officiating, with interment in Union cemetery.

Mr. Meager, who was a retired coal miner, was a native of England, and since his retirement from active work, had been living with his daughter. He is also survived by two sons, Victor Meager, Eckhart, Md., and Edwin J. Meager, Meyersdale; three daughters, Mrs. C. H. Williams, Yakima, Wash.; Mrs. W. A. Brace, Cayuse, Oregon; and Mrs. Snelzer, Meyersdale; fourteen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. His wife, Mary Hider Meager, died in 1935.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. George Schramm and son, Eddie, Shipley apartments, were visitors today at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schramm, Salisbury.

Mrs. J. F. Willard, who has been a resident of Meyersdale for many years, has disposed of her property, and left yesterday for Washington, D. C., to reside with her daughters, Miss Mary June Willard and Mrs. W. F. Smith.

Mrs. Paul K. McMillan returned yesterday from a visit with her son, Dick Diver, at West Point, and also friends at Wilton, N. Y., and in New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McCarthy left this morning for a visit with their son, Jack McCarthy, who is an instructor in Pennsylvania State college. They will also attend the sessions of the Pennsylvania State Sunday School convention, which will meet in Huntingdon during this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lief, Cumberland, are spending a few days as guests of Mrs. Lief's mother, Mrs. J. L. Tressler.

Councilman and Mrs. S. S. Rickard returned today from a week's visit with the former's father, J. C. Rickard, and other members of the family, at Blain.

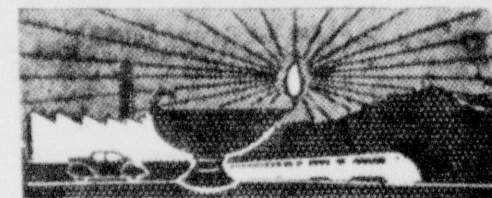

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Julia I. Harrison; one son, PFC. James Randolph Jr., located somewhere in England; one daughter, Mrs. D. W. Moouau, Westport; four brothers, O. A. Harrison, J. F. Harrison, Roy Harrison, and C. Harrison all of Westport; and one sister, Mrs. Samuel Dignan, Westport.

Could We Make This Switch?

PLANS are now being made by the federal department of Agriculture for the settlement of returning soldiers on the land. In complete reversal of its former program of scarcity, it would accomplish this by increasing the farm productivity by fifty per cent through cropping 140,000,000 acres now in wood lots, marshes, unneeded pastures and arid sections, and boosting the capacity of land now tilled.

It is an alluring picture; but it contains some implications that need pondering. We have tremendous capacity for producing farm crops, but if we are to become the market basket of the world, we shall have to exchange our farm products for something else, which, obviously, would be the manufacturing industry of Europe and Asia.

That means, naturally, that we should be contracting our manufacturing industry as rapidly as we expand our agriculture, because we cannot absorb foreign manufactures and our own as well; nor could we export manufactured products in important quantities because our foreign customers will have only manufactured ware with which to pay for our farm products.

In other words, if we go all out for food production, we shall have to switch to an agricultural economy, to a rural social organization, thus completely revolutionizing our national existence. The results of such a shift are, of course, unpredictable, but doubt is tenable that the American people are now temperamentally suited for such a radical change and that an economy dependent chiefly upon agriculture would support the national welfare as well as the traditional balanced economy this country has heretofore had.

Two Things Demanded By the Taxpayers

PUBLIC REACTION to the administration tax measure handed to the Congress by the Treasury department is considerably more vociferous than it has yet been in this wartime and the people generally appear to be more resentful over it than over any other taxing proposal of recent years. There is widespread protest against its continuation of discriminatory provisions and its palpably political angle. There is a feeling that the administration has lost all sense of proportion where money is concerned, and there is much in the record to substantiate it.

Amidst all the objections that have been raised, two things appear to stand out quite clearly. One is a demand that there be reductions of the inequitable phases of federal income taxing to fair and bearable proportions. The other is that there be a whittling of federal expenditures to eliminate waste and non-essentials so that a substantial percentage of the difference between income and outgo can be taken up.

All in all, the people seem to agree heartily with the characterization of Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means committee, that this fantastical proposal is "utterly indefensible."

Shameless Contract Forced by Petrillo

EVERY DECENT and FARSIGHTED UNION MAN in the nation must be shuddering as he hears about the contract that James Caesar Petrillo has driven through with one of the large record-making companies.

The company must pay directly to the Petrillo office a fee on every record sold. With this fee, the company must file the serial number of each record, plus any additional information that Mr. Petrillo may "reasonably require."

The musicians' union's laws, rules and regulations are made part of the contract and the union may examine the company's financial records at any time it wishes. In addition to all this, the union stipulates in the contract that it will not alter any of its rules or bylaws.

This is one of the most shameless contracts ever signed. It is not a union contract at all. It is a private tax on the employer. The money goes directly to Mr. Petrillo's office and makes the national president even financially independent of his own union.

And the stipulation that the union will not alter any bylaws simply means that the members of the union can not even vote to change any of the ways by which the money is paid, or how it is used. But don't blame Mr. Petrillo. And don't blame the company. Mr. Petrillo is merely using the powers which were given to him by the federal administration, powers sanctioned by a Congress which has been afraid to talk up to protect the rights of the working man and woman. These are "labor's rights," as interpreted by the New Deal.

Woman's Rating In War Jobs

JOB FOR JOB, women have outproduced men in most cases, according to a survey of the performances of 35,000 women war workers in four Ford plants. The survey was made by efficiency experts.

In order to achieve this record it was found that a certain amount of adjustment was necessary so that in the end it was the automobile industry which adjusted to the women, instead of vice versa. It was discovered that women workers did not perform well in extreme heat and so some work divisions had to be air-conditioned before the women reached the men's work rate.

The survey also found that women are decidedly naive about mechanical might, refusing to fear the machines with which they worked. In consequence it was necessary to "fool-proof" machines with extra guards before an adequate safety standard was attained. When they were trained on specially designed machines, women turned out parts equal to those of the best skilled workmen—and in greater quantity.

These findings might prove disconcerting to those of the male persuasion who might see here a trend which would result ultimately in toppling man from his long-held throne and in extinction of femininity as it has been known since time began. Fortunately for the male ego, the Detroit survey also uncovered two additional facts which make the picture of the future less bleak.

Women are still the weaker sex, the survey found. The handling of heavy turrets, done manually by the men, is now accomplished by mobile electric cranes operated by women. Women were found to be timid about noise and so do not like to work on machines which make a great clatter. Thus, "a woman's a woman for a' that," to paraphrase the poet.

In a speech addressed to Norwegian Quislings, Hitler expresses concern over the security of post-war Europe. That's something new — the cornered burglar worrying about the safety of his investments!

The fellow who writes the double talk in the German war communiqués must be trying to prepare for a job as a comedian after the war.

The Brower's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Do you know how books are conceived? Catherine Connell, of the poetry section of a New York store, noticed every day that a score of boys in uniform were asking for some pocket edition of love poems. (You know why? To quote in letters to that girl back home.) No such book existed. So she wrote — to compile an anthology of "Love Poems Old and New," although some such title as "Dear —" would have pleased the Brower more. She took it to Random House, which snatched it pronto, and it will be out on November 15. Twenty-five thousand copies in cloth, $1.50. In leather, $2.50. (The Brower took the Oxford Book of English Verse to the last war.)

Organizations should beware of initials. Today we received a letter with the initials F.P.A. on the envelope and immediately wondered: "What is Franklin P. Adams writing to US about?" We felt that was distinctly a drop in interest when we opened the thing and learned it was from the Foreign Policy Association inviting us to join at $5 a year. . . . See what we mean about initials? And, speaking of them, why do so many publishers use the word "initial" when they mean "first"?

Lloyd C. Douglas's "The Robe" is selling more copies every month now than in any month since publication, in its twenty-fourth printing and up to 511,000 copies. . . . Marquand's "So Little Time," out only a couple of months, already has 482,000 copies in print, benefiting however by a large Book-of-the-Month Club edition. . . . But the Brower has a mean hunch that not more than seventy-five per cent of the purchasers of "So Little Time" will read every word of it.

Bucklin Moon, who wrote "The Darker Brother," is a member of the editorial department of Doubleday Doran which published the book. He submitted it under the name of George L. Hack and the board accepted it without knowing the author was looking over their shoulders. . . . His only hobbies are a Siamese cat and chess.

Back in 1915 Little Brown and Company published Janet Hill's "Canning, Preserving and Jelly Making," which sold only 1,400 copies the first year and 973 in 1916. The publishers revised and reprinted the book this year—and in its first two months it sold as many books as in the first two years of its existence.

Kenneth Stewart, author of "News Is What We Make It," has quit the OWI and returned to his New York newspaper, not at all disillusioned with working for the government but believing that newspapermen should stick to their last. Funny thing about that book—although its publishers describe its author as "a newspaperman's newspaperman" in our shop although most of the fellows like it, some very much, some tepidly, few of them agree with that description.

Earl Guy, author of that excellent novel "Heaven Is a Sunswamp Hill" says he wrote it "without a dictionary, a thesaurus or anything else, save my memory." The Brower approves of dictionaries but distrusts authors who use thesaurus. Also, Earl Guy wrote it on brown paper sacks split in half, and in prison. Don't ask why he was in prison or in what prison. The annoying Macmillan people didn't say. . . . Quotation from "The Last Inspection" by Alun Lewis, a young Welsh infantry officer now stationed in India: "The soldier's heart leaps for leave. But when I go home on leave, I feel vaguely 'out of it.'" . . . Enough from Marshall Maslin.

THE BROWER.

Lawrence Declares Jobs for Soldiers Are Being Ignored

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—There's not much politics during a war, but plenty of governmental action taken during war causes political repercussions after a war.

Almost everybody who has visited the camps where American forces are stationed overseas comes back with a story that the American soldier is worried about what will happen to him when he gets home—will he have a job on an opportunity to work out something for himself in business, or must he look forward to years of another WPA and leaf-raking?

The policies of the postwar period are being made now. They are being made by the Treasury department and by the Senate Finance committee. These policies are tax methods that mean American business will have a hard time furnishing opportunities to returning soldiers and sailors.

The tax program offered by the Treasury is not only unrealistic but, like preceding tax bills already passed, it completely ignores the biggest fact about postwar economies—the necessity of businesses, especially small ones, to develop cash reserves enabling them to cushion the shock of the period of declining purchasing power.

Inflation Not Cured

With all the hue and cry about preventing inflation, the fact is that very little is being done by administration policies to cure the inflation that already exists. Economists point out that the vast sums distributed to the millions of workers are not really being taxed. The net income of individuals is far higher than it was before the war. As for businesses, most of them will show a net income below pre-war levels. Many large corporations with big war contracts show the opposite, but the many businesses in the smaller classification, and especially those in non-war businesses which have been held down as to fixed prices, are finding their net after taxes much lower than in the years before the war. This is but another way of saying that these businesses are not adding to their surpluses but are beginning to eat up those surpluses.

For individual workers, there is the protection of unemployment insurance. For small businesses, there is no such protection. Unless reserves are accumulated now and "seed money" is put aside for the future, the American system of private enterprise will receive a terrible blow after the war. It will do little good then for the electorate to condemn the New Deal and sweep from political power anybody who had anything to do with the Roosevelt administration. Such reprisals at the polls will occur after the damage has been done.

Domestic Leadership Tragic

President Roosevelt's leadership on war strategy has been superb, but his failure to assert a leadership on the economic side is one of the tragedies of our times. The British, under Prime Minister Churchill, are making plans to keep their businesses alive and they are losing little time in planning for the restoration of their trade and financial operations. Mr. Roosevelt has been so preoccupied with the war that he has failed to note that the American business system, which consists of small as well as large units, is now being asked to pay taxes that wipe out any chance for reserves.

Jobs can be created on a sound basis only by private enterprise. Government-made jobs only mean more WPA's and more deficits, and the American people are not likely to approve of more leaf-raking and public works spending on borrowed money. Too many citizens are buying bonds today and will expect their government to deal fairly with the borrowers by limiting future borrowings to the minimum necessary to maintain essential opera-

Opposition of Government Jobholders Is Expected To Thwart Economy Drive

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Demand for economy in lieu of increased taxes furnishes an excellent talking point, but has underlying defects.

The need for economy is real. Not even a minor portion of the waste in war expenditures is probably yet popularly suspected. Necessities of military censorship and a general disinclination to expose any fact which would injure the war effort have restricted free discussion of the topic.

All that the congressmen have been able to do so far is to peek away at special examples to which their attention is drawn, and try to force corrections.

Outstanding economy leader has been Senator Byrd, of Virginia, who has done much good in this way. He is now trying to cut the federal employee roster, but, in the face of the great resistance of bureaucracy, success even to the modest extent of 300,000 persons is unlikely.

More Bootstrap Lifting

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Dr. John D. Cundliffe, research chairman of the Institute of Pacific Relations, declared in a recent speech that if the industrial tempo of America is to be maintained in the post-war world, we must help the undeveloped Nations produce more.

"We have developed our industries to a point where they can produce much more than can be consumed within the United States," he explained. "To keep them operating at a high level after the war, we must help the economically backward countries to produce more. If we want these people to buy more from us, it doesn't do us any good in the long run just to lend them money. They must be able to produce more so that they have their own means to buy from us, and to pay us with products they have and we need."

We confess our inability to follow this line of reasoning. We have no doubt that there will be opportunities for constructive American investment abroad after the war. But to picture, as all of our more ardent internationalists do, an overflowing American prosperity built on industrial development in other lands, is beyond our powers. They start with the premise that other peoples can't buy in quantity from us unless we buy in quantity from them. Very well. But what does that add up to? It adds up to exchange.

The more we buy from others, the less we must consume of our own products. When imports are competitive, therefore, we are in fact trading the domestic market for the foreign market. And that puts us, inescapably, in competition with lower foreign living standards. Those are the bold facts. They cannot be dissolved by flowery talk about world prosperity. They are the trade realities we face.

The more we hear about the virtues of an expanding world trade, the more we become convinced that international trade is the most overrated economic factor in existence. In the final analysis, the only constructive international trade is that which involves non-competitive goods.

Rayburn behind Cox Ousting

Quiet replacement of Georgia's Representative Cox by California's Lea as head of the radio investigation was engineered by Speaker Rayburn. Several times previously, Mr. Rayburn has declined to ask for Mr. Cox's resignation, although privately requested by liberal groups.

The course of the inquiry, however, made Cox's position untenable. The embarrassment of FCC charges concerning his receipt of a check from a radio station, enabled the liberals he was pursuing to ruin the force of the whole inquiry. The matter has assumed some of the characteristics of a personal comedy.

New chairman, Mr. Lea, will not be bound by ideological prejudices and has courage. No one is protesting the change.

Draft Defeat Foreseen

Senate defeat of the Wheeler draft fathers exclusion bill was due to circumstances foreseen. Neither house dare stand firmly against the military leaders on a point of military necessity.

On no important phase of the war effort has Congress ever overridden the plans of army and navy directors. Farthest Congress has gone in that way was in the farmer draft directive last session, but this involved the vital matter of food.

Taxes Should Be Realistic

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

In the elaborate proposals for revising the federal tax laws which the Treasury has laid before Congress is a recommendation to reduce the exemption for dependents from $350 to $300.

We have no serious objection to that proposal, but we do have another change to suggest in the law relating to dependents which ought to be made regardless of the size of the exemption.

As the law now stands, the taxpayer is not entitled to an exemption for a dependent child after the child reaches the age of 18—unless the child is mentally or physically incapable of self-support.

Most American fathers and mothers want to give their sons and daughters the benefit of a college education if they can possibly manage it, and this has generally come to be regarded as a laudable ambition. Indeed, the federal government is rapidly swinging around to the idea that after this war is over it ought to finance the college education of all young men it has taken into the armed services.

Now the average boy or girl reaches college about 18, and if the family finances a college education, a $300 or even a $350 exemption doesn't begin to cover the drain on the family treasury.

It seems to us that the law relating to exemptions ought to be changed to provide that a family can continue to make the deduction for dependent children as long as they are actually dependent because they are continuing their education.

That would make the tax laws conform to reality, and might offer some slight encouragement for parents to continue their efforts to send their children to college—instead of hoping that the government will take over the financial burden.

Senator Brewster Says Teamwork Is Needed for Peace

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—If the United States is going to pitch in big league international politics, it is time it learned to play ball within its own country. This in simple Americana is the general opinion of the five United States senators who have just returned from an official tour of the war zones.

"This means," said Senator Ralph Brewster, of Maine, in talking about the 46,000-mile senatorial journey, "that we have got to learn team work. More than this, we've got to copy the superb team work of the British. Everywhere we went we found the British agencies pulling together in harmony—for the British. Naturally, the British are pulling meanwhile for the United Nations. There is no doubt about that. There is also no doubt that the United States is scattering its resources and brains, and forgetting, sometimes to which country it owes first allegiance."

Indeed, some of the foreign goings-on of the United States are so harebrained that the people whom this country most wants to help are suspicious of our purpose. This is another conclusion the visiting senators reached.

True in Australia

Especially is this true in Australia. There, when Senator Brewster and Senator James Mead held a press conference, they had to answer this question: "Has the United States imperialistic intentions? Does she wish, by chance, to acquire more territory over here? If she doesn't, why is she spending so much money outside of her own country?"

Our generosity, our determined Lady Bountiful attitude, is disturbing the governments of our Allies, who, in self-defense, sometimes try to minimize the U. S. aid, and to hint to their people that Americans are an unstable, changeable people.

A year ago, when most of the world was terrified of the Japs and Nazis, our Allies were happy to accept our aid. Now, so the touring legislators report, many foreigners wish that we would proceed more cautiously with our planes for relief and rehabilitation in occupied and war-shocked countries.

Impetuosity Is Decried

One of the most important officials of a country recently freed from Axis control told the senators that he was frightened at the headlong rush of the United States to move in with help where help wasn't needed.

The lack of correct information abroad about America's part in the war is further evidence that this country is not pitching prudently in the big international league. In Chungking, our embassy receives every morning from Reuters, the British news agency, a report that frequently overlooks the importance of some U. S. war effort. "Senator Brewster reported. "Three or four days later, the American news agencies produce their report. But who wants to read an old report? The situation got so bad in Chungking that the American embassy there protested to Anthony Eden about certain articles supplied by Reuters and published in Chinese papers. These articles were extremely embarrassing to the United States and very favorable to Britain. Eden said he was sorry but he couldn't interfere with "the freedom of the press."

India a "Hot Potato"

India is one country about which the American legislators have very definite ideas. "Leave India alone," they say. "It's a hot potato, England's hot potato, not ours."

They wonder, too, how it happens that the OWI has 100 agents in India selling the Indian people on the American way of life. What right, asks Senator Brewster, have we to propagandize in India? We got pretty mad when a recent Russian ambassador propagandized in the United States.

Well, I have been trying to tell you some of the discoveries Senators Brewster, Russell, Lodge, Chandler and Mead made on their voyaging. It was a thrilling journey. It must be made a useful one.

I should like to have the American people know what the travelers learned. It is time indeed that we learned to pitch for America first in this country. It is not disloyal to the war effort to suggest this. Nor is it disloyal to say to Congress, "You have the U. S. ball in your own hands in the international game. It's up to you to clear up the confusion and lack of teamwork reported by the representatives you sent abroad. You can't blame EVERYTHING on the president. Don't you hold the purse strings?"

Senator Brewster

ASK ADAM

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

At eleven-thirty the Royster pair said they had to leave, as they had a long drive. Bill didn't urge them to play another rubber, and as Alicia had done so he would have felt impelled to kick her under the table. He paid up his losses with what he hoped was a nonchalant air, and went down to the Roysters' car, Alicia holding to his arm.

"I'll let you know soon, Mr. Royster," Alicia said, "as to whether or not I want to take you up on that proposition."

"Better not wait too long, my lady," Royster said.

"No," said Mrs. Royster. "Andrew knows his investments—and now's the time to strike—while the iron is hot."

As soon as the Roysters had gone, Bill started for his own car.

"Don't be in such a hurry," said Alicia. "You haven't yet told me what you think of investing my money as Mr. Royster wants me to."

"No time now," said Bill. "I have to get home. I've a big day before me. Besides, I'm not a lawyer and I don't know much about investments. I deal in real estate."

"But Bill, dear, I—"

"Sorry, Alicia," he cut in. "Maybe when you make up your mind to sell me that property, I'll be able to concentrate on investments. As you see, you're getting me going round like a squirrel in a cage."

Alicia laughed softly and stepped down.

"You sweet old thing, you," she said. "I'll call you day after tomorrow, sure. I'm going to talk with my second husband's lawyer up in Richmond. He always liked me, and I like and fatherly. He got me a generous settlement, and I'll let him help me make my final decision."

"Okay," said Bill. "But make it snappy."

"I promise," said Alicia. She reached up and pulled Bill's face close to hers. "Don't be too hard on me, Bill. I'm such a lonely person—and sometimes I feel I want to keep you near me as long as possible."

Bill thought, "Now Susan is right. He said, 'I understand Alicia. Her business is business, and—'"

"Dan your old business," Bill Potter, Alicia said, and kissed him.

"Good Lord!" gasped Bill. And then, swung off his feet by Alicia's perfume, and the softness of her hair, he kissed her right back again.

He held her a moment, knowing she was acting the perfect idiot, and despising himself. "I hope you'll get good news by telephone. Don't forget that you're doing something for the war effort in selling the property for workmen's homes."

"I won't," said Alicia. "Good night, Bill—dear."

Bill jumped in his car, feeling a dizzy in the head, and drove off. He kept up a good speed for a number of miles, still hoping that he might beat Susan Potter in arriving at the perfectly appointed, completely managed Potter domicile. And because of his hope along that line, he decided upon a short nap and took it.

New Typewriter Increases Speed

Keyboard Changes Adopted by Navy

By FRANCIS J. KELLY AND HAMILTON W. FARON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP)—We laughed when they set us down to play the navy's new typewriter.

It was a bewildered kind of laugh, because almost none of the letters on the keyboard are anywhere near where we are used to finding them.

Faron tried the old dodge of reporters trying to look busy, and rapped out "now is the time for all good men," etc. This is what showed up:

"Br. co yd. ym. urp ann irre m. b. yr. jrm. vr yd. ace ru yd. er lapyf"

Kelly carried the melody, with this is a sample of work done by this machine:

The result:

"Ydco co a oamln ru yd. rpt erb. xf ydco majdeb. v"

But it should be stressed that we haven't taken the course the navy has given some girls who now are able to clip along at 108 perfectly good words to a minute. A professional has made 190. The old world record was 149.

The keys are arranged in a way scientifically figured out for easiest use and its inventor, Lt. Comdr. August Dvorak, contends that the typewriter will increase output by about thirty-five per cent.

Dvorak says that on the standard keyboard the left hand is called on to do fifty-seven per cent of the work. Under his system the right hand does the major part, fifty-six per cent.

There's another advantage he hasn't mentioned:

Those strings of X's which usually decorate our copy now come out pretty, like this: qqqqqqq.

Pinafore Polly

Susan had not come home. He got undressed as quickly as possible and slipped into his half of the twin beds. He was just dozing off, just getting himself all mixed up with half formed dreams that had to do with Captain Kidd, buried treasure, and factories being blown to bits, when he heard Susan coming up the stairs.

"I'm sorry I'm so late," she said, when she came into the bedroom and saw him. "But Mrs. Platt made us go over and over some of those scenes."

"Those you play with Adam North?" said Bill.

"All of those," said Susan, "and some others."

"You and Adam must have them down perfectly by this time."

"We don't do half bad," said Susan. "Did you work very late?"

"Yep," said Bill. "I did."

And it was no lie, he told himself. If playing bridge with Alicia Carter and that Royster pair wasn't hard work, then he didn't know what hard work was.

Susan went into the bathroom. "Go on, get some sleep," she called out. "I won't have the light on long."

"Thanks, honey," said Bill. And suddenly he realized how terribly much Susan Potter meant to him. (To Be Continued)

Lucky Boy Gets Two Birthday Parties

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mrs. Chloe Harrington invited friends from a wide area to celebrate at a birthday party for her son, T. R. Harrington III, aged four.

Just as the guests started to cut the birthday cake, Mrs. Harrington's mother-in-law telephoned: "Chloe, you ought to know more about your child's birthday than this."

The birthday was still ten days away.

So another party was planned for the proper date. Meant another cake, too.

ONLY "BUTCH" ISN'T CONCERNED

"BUTCH," THE TRAINED POOCH, doesn't seem to mind a bit as Ann Sothern gives James Craig a piece of her mind in M-G-M's "Swing Shift Maisie," due Wednesday at the Maryland theater. John Qualen, who seems to have taken a paternal interest in Maisie, is quite interested in how Maisie will come out, after it's all over.

"The Fallen Sparrow" Coming to Liberty

Modern New York city is the scene of ruthless, deadly matching of wits and courage between one American and many Nazi agents in "The Fallen Sparrow," film thriller starring Maureen O'Hara and John Garfield, and starting Thursday at the Liberty theater.

The action pictured is the aftermath of a young American's adventures in the Spanish civil war, and subsequent imprisonment and torture by Nazis, who fail to pry a secret from him by this direct means. The New York action represents their resort to even more terrifying, but subtler methods.

Partly by making hard-boiled love to Miss O'Hara and two other beautiful women, Martha O'Driscoll and Patricia Morison, Garfield is finally in a position to outwit his enemies and avenge ruthlessly his own wrongs and the murder of two of his friends.

Ex-Football Star Seen In "Swing Shift Maisie"

James Craig, husky ex-football star, who distinguished himself in "Kitty Foyle" and "The Human Comedy," is teamed with Ann Sothern for the first time, playing her test pilot sweetheart in M-G-M's "Swing Shift Maisie," latest adventure of the glamorous showgirl, opening Wednesday at the Maryland theater.

In the latest of the series Miss Sothern abandons a vaudeville act to don overalls as a worker in a

Jinx Sings, Dances In Embassy Musical

Columbia's "She Has What It Takes," with its glamorous backstage locale, comes to the Embassy theater screen tomorrow with tuneful melodies galore.

Jinx Falkenburg, as a talented "nobody" who rises to fame overnight in a Broadway musical, sings two numbers: "Moon on My Pillow" and "I Bumped My Head on a Star."

In addition, Jinx, with a chorus of some of Hollywood's prettiest chorines, sings a lively and timely tune titled "Let's Pull Together."

HERE'S HOW EMPLOYED WOMEN CAN GET A LOAN

"on their own"

monthly repays a loan in 12 months

MODERN girls are proud of standing on their own feet, dislike asking favors of others, especially when they need cash. At Personal, where employed women can get $10 to $250 or more on signature alone, they don't borrow "on their own." They don't borrow unnecessarily, but if a loan is the best solution to your problem, call us or come in today (on your lunch hour if you wish). Through our special service for employed women, you'll get the friendly, private consideration and prompt attention that means so much to women who work.

Russo Pitches and Bats Yanks Into 3-1 Lead in World Series

American Leaguers Win 2-1 as Sloppy Support Costs Young Southpaw a Shutout

TAMES REDBIRDS

MARIUS RUSSO... pitches Yankees to 2-1 victory over Cardinals in the 1943 World Series.

The ruddy-cheeked young southpaw, showing not the least sign of the sore arm which had bothered him for two seasons and cast doubt on the advisability of using him in the series at all, held the Redbirds to seven hits and could have had a shutout.

However, when sloppy support cost him a run to tie the score in the seventh inning, Russo came up with his second double of the contest and scored the deciding run.

Despite the heat which caused thousands of the spectators jammed in the stands to sit in their shirt sleeves, Russo performed effortlessly on the mound, kept ahead of almost every batter and by all odds produced the outstanding pitching job of the series to date.

The game was a tense struggle with Max Lanier, also a southpaw, trying vainly to match Russo's fine hurling and make up for his defeat by the Yankees in the opening game at New York last Tuesday, when Lanier's own fielding error and a two-base wild pitch contributed largely to his loss.

Brecheen Charged with Loss

In seven innings Lanier gave up four of New York's six hits and fanned five and he was able to leave the game with the score tied so that it eventually was Harry Brecheen, a freshman lefthander making his first relief appearance of the series who was charged with the setback.

The Yankees were outbatted, but there was authority in the way they scored both their runs.

With two out in the fourth inning Joe (Flash) Gordon smashed a line double into left center on which Harry Walker attempted a diving catch without being able to come up with the ball. On the next pitch Bill Dickey laced a hot ground single right through the middle of the infield and into center for the run.

The Cardinals got this one back in the seventh with the help of a defense debacle perhaps never matched by the Yankees in all their many series games.

Russo set down the first two men in the inning and made Ray Sanders lift an easy pop fly to Frank Crosetti on the grass in back of short, but the veteran shortstop suddenly seemed to lose the ball in the sun and juggled it to the ground when it dropped.

Then on the first pitch Danny Litwhiler hit a grounder down the first baseline. The ball hit the bag, bounced high and caromed on out into right field for a double that put Sanders on third. This caused Martin Marion to be purposely passed and Frank Demaree, a fat, old reserve outfielder, came up to bat for Lanier.

Fans Litter Outfield

He fouled off the first pitch and followed by dumping an easy grounder to Third Baseman Bill Johnson. But Johnson was intent on figuring out the play, whether to tag Litwhiler coming into third or to throw to first. His momentary wavering caused him to fumble the ball and all hands were safe, Sanders scoring.

This comeback by the Cardinals, though tainted by the Yankees' misplays, caused the big crowd to erupt in a noisy demonstration during which the fans littered the outfield with hundreds of bottles and other debris. The game was stopped for several minutes while park attendants carrying bushel baskets cleared up the playing field.

While this was going on Russo went back to the dugout and sat down. When play was resumed he made the next batter, Lou Klein, ground into a force play.

The joy of the St. Louis supporters was short-lived, however, and Russo himself took care of erasing it.

The tall, 29-year-old pitcher who was born and raised in New York had caused the Cardinals trouble twice earlier at bat by waiting out a walk in the third inning and by bunting a double into the right field corner in the fifth.

He led off for the Yanks in the eighth immediately after the Redbirds' break-through and this time he connected with one of Brecheen's pitches for a long double to the left field corner.

It was just the punch the Yankees needed and they went about converting it into a run without a moment's hesitation. Tuck Stainback laid down a good bunt sacrificing Russo to third and Crosetti delivered a tremendous fly to center to bring home the winning run. Chandler Faces Cooper

The Cardinals put two runners on base in their half of the eighth when Stan Musial and Walker Cooper beat out infield hits with one out, but Russo suppressed the next two batters and in the ninth, when Marion doubled with one out, he again retired the next two batters with apparent ease.

The big crowd which paid $155,864 for the privilege of sitting hot, packed and uncomfortable on standing layers deep in the rear aisles, also helped swell the players' pool of the series to a record figure of $488,005.74, approximately $14,000 higher than ever was reached when the players received a share of the radio rights.

But the fans who turned out today to cheer the Cardinals must have been impressed by the invin-

Redskins Defeat Brooklyn, 27 to 0, in League Opener

Packers Smother Detroit, 35-14, and Bears Whip Cards, 20-0

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP)—The world champion Washington Redskins opened their 1943 campaign today with Slingin' Sammy Baugh pitching them to a 27-0 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers before 35,540 spectators.

Baugh, showing the passing skill that carried the Redskins to the professional title last season, tossed to Halfback Wilbur Moore for a pair of touchdowns and set the stage for the other two scores with bullet-like heaves that caught Brooklyn's defense flatfooted.

It was Brooklyn's third straight defeat. The Dodgers have yet to score a point in league competition.

The Baugh-Moore combination brought Washington a score on the third play of the game on a toss that was good for forty-nine yards. Near the end of the first period Sammy heaved a short pass over the line to Andy Farkas for another counter. Bob Materson placed-kicked the extra points.

Starting on their own forty-seven, the Redskins scored in two plays in the third period on end runs by Farkas and Moore, with effective blocking on both dashes. Dick Aguirre's conversion attempt hit the cross bar.

Bears Win 20-0

CHICAGO, Oct. 10 (AP)—Sid Luckman threw his sixth and seventh touchdown passes of the season and his long aerials paved the way for a third score today as the Chicago Bears defeated the Chicago Cardinals, 20 to 0, in a National Football League game before 24,658 spectators in Wrigley field.

Both Luckman's scoring passes were thrown in the third period, after the surprisingly strong Cardinals had shut out the Bears in the first half. Sid's first successful effort was thrown from the Bears' forty-two yard line to End John Lindell, for a touchdown.

Later in the same period Luckman tossed a pass to Connie Berry in a play covering twenty-one yards for the second Bear touchdown, with Bob Snyder kicking the extra point.

In the final period the Bears marched eighty yards, aided by a thirty-three yard pass from Luckman to Hampton Pook and a twenty-three yard aerial from Sid to Harry Clark, with Geyser again making the score on a two-yard plunge and Snyder booting the point.

Packers Score, 35-14

GREEN BAY, Wis., Oct. 10 (AP)—The Green Bay Packers, cleverly mixing their overhead game with a devastating ground attack, scored in every quarter today to smother the Detroit Lions, 35 to 14, in a National League football game before a crowd of 22,000.

Unleashing the most diversified attack they have shown in years the Packers completely dominated the play and seldom used their ace pass catcher, Don Hutson, in anything but decoy roles. They counted twice in the first quarter after marches of forty-two and sixty-one yards, went seventy-five yards for a score in the second period, marched sixty-seven for their fourth counter and fifty-four for the final marker. The Packers also tried three field goals, but without success.

Detroit pushed across both touchdowns on plays that swept the length of the field. The first Lion score came on two plays that were good for eighty yards and the final marker came in the closing minutes on a forward and lateral combination that ripped off seventy-five yards.

Notre Dame May Lose Key Gridmen At End of Month

Bertelli and Other Naval Trainees Likely To Be Moved

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (AP)—Notre Dame, playing with such precision that the hands of the Michigan field clock stopped in envy, has stepped front and center as the country's outstanding football team.

But the same naval trainees who have made Notre Dame an October power may keep the school from the gridiron greatness it enjoyed under the late Knute Rockne.

Angelo Bertelli, whose 1-dotting passes Saturday were instrumental in the 35 to 12 rout of Michigan, and half dozen teammates likely will be moved along at the end of the month by the Navy department—to the anguish of Coach Frank Leahy and the joy of the Irish's November foes.

Bertelli tossed for two touchdowns, plunged for a third, set up a fourth and kicked five extra points as the point-crazed Ramblers bowled over Michigan, rated as the second strongest team in the country, for their third straight conquest.

Field Clock Stops

In only one period were the Notre Dames held in check, that in the seven-minute fourth. The hands of the big Michigan clock became so engrossed with Irish efficiency in the third that they stopped and the teams bumped into each other for twenty-three minutes instead of the regulation fifteen. Officials then cut the fourth in half.

Notre Dame's victory generally was expected although the margin of triumph was a surprise.

Other easy victories among the better teams included Army's 51 to 0 massacre of previously unbeaten Temple; Purdue's shellacking of Camp Grant, 19 to 0, and Iowa Pre-Flight's 25 to 0 walloping of Iowa.

Navy registered a 14 to 13 victory over Duke when Bob Gant, Duke's great end, missed a conversion attempt for only the third time in twenty-one tries this year; Penn eliminated Dartmouth from the unbeaten ranks by the same margin, 7 to 6; and Southern California had to go all out to beat St. Mary's Pre-Flight, 13 to 0.

Coach Amos A. Stagg's College of Pacific elite polished off California, 12 to 6; Missouri opened its drive for a third straight Big Six title by defeating Kansas State, 47 to 14; and Ohio State gained recognition as the country's best all-around team by losing to Great Lakes, only 13 to 6.

Surprises Numerous

Surprises were numerous. Illinois, after losing three straight, pounded out a 25 to 7 victory over Wisconsin; Worcester Tech whipped a confident Harvard eleven, 13 to 0; Tulane battered Rice, 33 to 0; and Texas A. and A. stopped Louisiana State's Steve Van Buren, 28 to 13.

Probably the biggest surprise, however, was the victory of little Rio Grande college in Ohio. With a male enrollment of only twenty-six and a long streak of thirty games that started in 1937, Rio Grande, downed Muskingum, 7 to 6.

Other results included Princeton's 30 to 0 defeat by Cornell; Pittsburgh's first triumph of the year, 20 to 0, over West Virginia; Georgia Tech's comeback at the expense of Georgia Navy, 35 to 7; Tulane's continued drive in its 34 to 7 verdict over Texas Tech and Texas's 13 to 7 decision over Oklahoma.

Holy Cross Wins

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 10 (AP)—The Holy Cross Crusaders rolled up an easy 32-0 victory over a hard-fighting but luckless Coast Guard Academy football team today before a 12,000 crowd. The victors scored in every period while protecting their own territory throughout the one-sided contest.

Allegany Launches C.V.A.L. Title Defense at Hagerstown Saturday

LaSalle, Topped 7-6 by Fort Hill, Meets Bullis School Eleven Here Saturday

The Allegany High Campers, who showed improvement in every department in romping to a 47-6 victory over the Ridgeley High Black-hawks last Friday night, will open their Cumberland Valley Athletic League title defense Saturday afternoon when they oppose Hagerstown high griders in the Hub City.

The LaSalle High Explorers, edged out 7-6 by Fort Hill's Sentinels in the intra-city series opener Saturday night before a crowd of nearly 3,000, are scheduled to tangle with the favored Bullis school eleven, of Silver Spring, Md., Saturday night in the Fort Hill bowl.

The Sentinels, who remained undefeated and untied by tripping LaSalle and who became the first team to top the Explorers this season, have an open date on their schedule for this weekend.

Two Conference Games Friday afternoon, Romney will play at Moorefield and Ridgeley will entertain Keyser in Potomac Valley Conference contests. Romney opened its conference campaign by routing Franklin, 31-6, and Keyser turned back Piedmont 20-7 in another conference scrap in games Friday.

In other district engagements the past weekend, Parsons defeated Thomas, 12-0; the Handley Judges, of Winchester, Va., won over the Berkeley Springs Indians, 21-0, and the Martinsburg Bulldogs topped Charles Town, 13-0.

All of the scoring in Saturday night's battle here was packed into the third quarter. Fort Hill Captain Warren "Chesty" Squires set up the Sentinels' touchdown as the second half opened by grabbing the kickoff on his thirteen and lugging the ball fifty-two yards to the LaSalle thirty-five. Nine plays later, Halfback Don "Bubbles" Whitman went across from the one and Ralph Beard converted with a placement that proved to be Fort Hill's winning edge.

LaSalle Strikes Back LaSalle struck back to score with- out giving up the ball. Jim Fahey returned the kickoff eleven yards to the Explorer thirty-six, and with Pullback Bill Nelson, Clay "Red" Ingram and Francis Passarelli reeling off short gains, the Blue and Gold moved steadily down the field.

A pass from Ingram to Joe Carter on fourth down produced the score. Fahey's hurried placement try for the point bounced into the backs of the linemen.

LaSalle collected eleven first downs to ten for the Sentinels but Fort Hill held the edge in rushing plays, piling up 181 yards to 161 for the Explorers. LaSalle took to the air lanes for forty-nine yards while the three passes completed by the Sentinels netted only three yards.

Someone in the stands threw an ear of corn to Charley (King Kong) Keller, the Yankee slugger. If there was a gag intended, Keller missed the point. Considering the shortage of corn for livestock feeding, he might have saved the cob for the hogs down on his farm in Maryland.

Mrs. Vera Cooper, mother of Morton and Walker Cooper of the Cardinals, came to St. Louis with her sons after her husband's funeral at Independence, Mo., yesterday. She was not at the game and Walker said she would not attend tomorrow when Morton is scheduled to pitch.

"She's in no condition to come out," Walker said. She has been in ill health for some time.

The Cavalade of America on NBC at 8 is starting its ninth consecutive year by presenting Bob Hope in a report on his recent tour of the war zones to entertain Uncle Sam's fighting men.

MBS has arranged its schedule from 2:15 on so that there will be space for some more world series broadcasting from St. Louis.

The CBS School of the Air begins another season on that network at 9:15 for the East, with a Midwest repeat at 3:30 p. m.

New Music Series

At 8:15 Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays, CBS is offering a new musical series that will have as its basis the music of Lynn Murray's orchestra and chorus.

Don Ameche as the guest will play "Heaven Can Wait" for the CBS Radio theater at 9. Also guesting on CBS in Ed Sullivan's spot at 7:15 will be Jack Benny and Mary, who just yesterday resumed their NBC Sunday night schedule.

Army and navy nurses who have been in the heat of the battle will be interviewed by the Vox Poppers for CBS at 8 from Walter Reed hospital, Washington.

The Rev. Cuthbert Martens O'Garra is scheduled for NBC at 6:30 to tell about "Escape from the Japs."

The Grace Fields series on MBS five nights a week at 9:15, scheduled to start Monday, has been postponed one week. Her delayed return from an overseas entertaining tour was the reason.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Fall Aid for Victory Garden Soil

By DEAN HALLIDAY

If your Victory vegetable garden is a small one, then spade it this fall. If it is a large one, have it plowed, for deeply plowed soil retains moisture longest.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the soil is the home of the plant and either directly or indirectly we live on the vegetable world, therefore the better the soil is prepared to house the plants' roots the better the harvest. By spading and plowing the soil's food must be placed where the plant roots can reach it.

Poor preparation of the soil usually results in an inferior stand of plants regardless of the high quality of the seed used. No amount of cultivating after planting will make up for lack of proper soil preparation beforehand. It is well to remember also that a small garden with soil well prepared and plants well tended will produce more than a larger one in which the soil is neglected.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

ARGUMENTS TWO-SIDED

PRACTICALLY any argument at the bridge table seems sound until you hear the other side of it. That applies emphatically to whether to jump a major suit bid all the way to game, when you have enough playing tricks for the purpose, or merely to give a jump to three. The latter has the advantage of allowing leeway for a mild alarm invitation by means of a cue bid of a side suit, without forcing the pair above game. Usually the deciding factor is whether the response to the opener is based largely on high card strength, when three may be the best bid, or on great distribution when the long jump has the advantage of shutting out opponents who probably have fair strength.

South was meekly defending his long jump as being due to weakness in high cards, when West came to his defense, saying: "If you had bid only 3-Spades, I would have put in with 4-Diamonds, prepared to show my clubs next if necessary to find a fit with my partner. After that, you fellows would never have had a chance to play the hand profitably, as my partner would have taken us to 7-Diamonds, which would have been set only two tricks. Of course, if you had wanted to bid 7-Spades and get set, then okay."

"I guess you're right," subsided North. "We really got the best result we could."

Q 8 7 2

Q 10
K 10 7
A 6 5

That closed out the bidding, as West would not dare stick his neck out at the level of five, without knowing which of his suits his partner might fit. But after North made an unbid small slam, with the loss of only a heart trick, he hopped all over South for his high jump.

If you had forced with only 3-Spades, said North, "I then distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc."
